A HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY

This is just a reminder of how Christianity has become so popular today.

During Charlemagne's reign, women were impaled on sharp perches inserted into the vagina. Slowly, over the days, the perch travelled the length of the body through the organs, causing enormous pain, simply because a woman was found picking up herbs in the forest. She was called a witch. Their cries could be heard for days as an example to those who did not accept Christian faith. Christianity has become so popular because of the simple terror of what would happen if it was not accepted. And people thought the Nazis were horrible.

Observe the Irony of Religious Life